North from Mission Bay

COne of the most beautiful aquatic playgrounds in the world was once a bleak estuary...muddy, swamp-like and useless. Thanks to the foresight and planning of the city of San Diego, the 4,600 acres of Mission Bay are now a vast vacationland of super clean beaches and picnic areas, boat launching ramps, islands, resort hotels and blue lagoons just waiting for the weekend sportsfisherman or water skier.

For those in search of sea, sun and sand, Mission Bay is the ideal place to enjoy San Diego's almost perfect weather. Boat rentals are available as are facilities for every type of water sport.

Vast expanses of grassy knolls lend themselves to the model airplane enthusiast. And there's plenty of space on the waters of the Bay in which miniature radio-controlled sailboats can maneuver. Other Bay activities range from rousing games of volleyball and touch football to kite flying to walking dogs along the shores.

Leaving from the San Diego Hilton, the luxury yacht Lady Hilton treats six passengers on one-hour daytime cruises to sights around the Bay daily except Monday during the summer. Phone (714) 276-4010 for more information.

The Bahia Belle, an early showboat replica, features a cocktail lounge and live entertainment as it plies the waters of Mission Bay between the Bahia, Catamaran and Vacation Village Hotels. The Belle leaves nightly from the Bahia Hotel dock during July and August. Phone: (714) 488-0551.

When you're staying at one of the fine hotels in Mission Bay, you're but minutes away from Sea World, the San Diego Zoo, golf, tennis and Pacific beaches. And, you're just a few miles south of one of the most beautiful spots in the Southland, the city of La Jolla and its spectacular coastline.

Sea World boasts the unique performances of Shamu, the killer whale, and a whale of a lot more... educated dolphins, sharks, seals, walruses, plus pearl divers, lovely landscaping and wonderful things for children to do in Cap'n Kids World. An underwater show of graceful mermaids, a dolphin and white whale delights young and old alike. There's a myriad of gift shops and snack bars, providing everything from chicken 'n' biscuits to pizza. For a more selective menu, families take the Atlantis Skyride and enjoy the spectacular view of Mission Bay on the way to Sea World's Atlantis Restaurant and Cocktail Lounge.

One of the most breathtaking scenic areas of a marked San Diego 52-mile scenic drive is that along the seashore of La Jolla. West Mission Bay Drive will take the motorist to Coast Boulevard if you follow the blue, white and yellow signs, featuring a white seagull. Here the restless sea has sculptured coves, deep caves and cliffs while providing outstanding places for diving and exploring tidepools.

The village of La Jolla itself is a mecca for the adventurous shopper. It abounds in distinctive apparel shops, book stores, boutiques, jewelry stores and art galleries. The La Jolla Museum of Contemporary Art contains a permanent collection and changing exhibits which specialize in 20th century art.

Traveling farther north along Coast Blvd. to La Jolla Shores will take you to a fascinating Underwater Park where the public may observe marine life and artifacts. Nearby is the famous Scripps Institution of Oceanography Aquarium and Museum with many educational exhibits.

Between the Torrey Pines Golf Course and Salk Institute is the Torrey Pines Glider Port, where you may observe sailplanes and colorful hang gliders taking off from cliffs high above the sea. The Torrey Pines State Reserve protects the rare and sculptured Torrey Pine and offers public guided nature walks. Phone (714) 755-2063. Since golf is a year-round sport in San Diego, the Torrey Pines Municipal Golf Course on N. Torrey Pines Road is a popular spot. It also features an excellent restaurant open to the public.

Driving even farther north along the S21 Coast Route (or 20 miles north of San Diego via Interstate 5) will take you to Del Mar, home of one of the most beautiful tracks for horse racing in the world. Sleek thoroughbreds race here each summer. Del Mar is also the site of the summer Southern California Exposition.

For those feeling the effects of the gasoline shortage and high prices, a short vacation on the playground of Mission Bay and points north makes for a relaxing, yet inexpensive holiday.

And South (and East) from Mission Bay...

is another wonderful park that lends itself to a family mini-vacation, the San Diego Zoo. It is one of the world's finest, housing thousands of fascinating animals in outdoor settings, along with birds and reptiles. There's a most informative guided bus tour on a three-mile safari taking you through most of the Zoo's sprawling canyons and mesas. Or you can get right up close with your camera and tripod to photograph giraffes, zebras, wild horses, bears, hippos, tigers, you name it and the Zoo has it... all in their natural habitats.

Children have their own zoo where they can see baby animals treated with tender loving care in special nurseries. It's a whole new miniature and natural world.

Because of the area's subtropical climate, the Zoo is also a superb botanical garden filled with many lush and tropical plants.

For a birds-eye view of San Diego and the Zoo, the Skyfari aerial tramway carries visitors 170 feet above the ground. It gives one a better perspective of the size and design of the 100-acre Zoo.

There are free animal shows, shaded picnic groves, gift shops, snack stands and the Golden Eagle Restaurant to enjoy on your day in the Zoo. It's a fun place to visit for the entire family — educational and fascinating. Phone (714) 234-3153 or (714) 231-1515.

Also in Balboa Park are many fine museums of interest to the family. 🐘

It wouldn't be a vacation without Sea World

Sea World is America's largest and finest marine life park. It's a day full of spectacular live shows, sights and sensations you won't find anywhere else. You'll thrill to Shamu®, the four-ton killer whale you've seen on many TV specials. And meet his new partner, Namu. You'll feed a dolphin, pet a pilot whale, hold a starfish in your hand. There's a fantastic new dolphin show, seals who court a princess in a Flipped Fairy Tail, and a creative play area just for pint-size pirates called Cap'n Kids World®. All this in acres of flowers, lagoons, exotic birds and winding paths. So don't go home 'til you see Sea World.

Pyrotechnics with a Personal Touch

Visitors to the Disneyland Magic Kingdom have come to expect the summer sparkle and glitter for which the Park is famous. This includes smiling hosts and hostesses in squeaky-clean costumes; streets and walks shining from early-morning scrubblings; newly-painted exteriors of the shops along Main Street, U.S.A.; and the reflection of sunlight shimmering in droplets of water on freshly planted flowers.

But the sparkle they've come to look forward to the most is that of the Park's traditional "Fantasy in the Sky" summertime fireworks extravaganza.

The changing patterns of ever changing colors delight young and old alike as they gaze skyward over Sleeping Beauty's castle on a warm summer evening, awed by the variety of the showers of light.

These unique pyrotechnic shows at the Park are over ten minutes long. The fireworks come from all over the world. Choices of fireworks are chosen by the Park Entertainment Division for both the Disneyland and Walt Disney World complexes. Several key factors are taken into consideration, such as lift time (the time between the initial explosion and the burst you see in the sky), the effect they create and the consistency of the effect.

Fireworks are thought to have been around for nearly 5,000 years. Although they have become more sophisticated and safe through years of experimentation, they are still considered a dangerous plaything. The production at the Magic Kingdom is supervised by five pyrotechnicians, licensed by the state of California. Three of them, Mickey Aronson and his sons, Bob and Paul, have made firing the Disneyland mortars a family profession. Aronson has been firing the show since its inception.

Shells are fired from mortars which are lined up in long rows and imbedded in soil in the back area of the Park. The shells are automatically triggered by taped cues in an electronic master control system which allows "choreographing" the program to music.

Long a familiar expression of victory or celebration, fireworks will have a special meaning this year as the Disneyland Park celebrates its 25th birthday with a new and even more colorful show signaling the end of a joyous summer day. 🍌

Summer Music in the Park

Summertime...and the Disneyland Park is alive with the sounds of music — live music coming from every direction. There are groups and bands to dance to, lively harmony to listen to and popular singing entertainers to watch on every starry night from mid-June 'til September.

Tomorrowland will be the place for disco dancing as the Space Mountain Stage pulsates with music and lights on Friday and Saturday evenings. On Sunday through Thursday, the Kids of the Kingdom will entertain with a special production, "Disneyland is Your Land."

Big band favorites will be on hand at Main Street's Carnation Plaza Gardens for dancing and nostalgic listening. Among those appearing this year will be Woody Herman, Freddy Martin, Louie Bellson, Bob Crosby, Les Brown, Billy Vaughn, Les Elgart, Glenn Miller's Orchestra conducted by Jimmy Henderson, Count Basie and Buddy Rich.

Other summertime sounds featured in the Theme Park are surfin' sounds from Tomorrowland Terrace; lively performances by the All-American College Band; Dixieland music in New Orleans Square; and ragtime piano from Coke Corner. And of course, the Golden Horseshoe is the place to go day and night for a good old-fashioned Old West show, featuring lively music, corny jokes and effervescent chorus girls. Additionally, you'll enjoy street performances by the Main Street Maniacs and the Jazz Minors.

Past visitors to the Park are familiar with the catchy theme music of the colorful "Main Street Electrical Parade" which this year will again wind its way through a darkened Disneyland nightly at 8:50 and 11:30 p.m. Like thousands of fireflies, tiny twinkling lights depict a host of scenes from classic Walt Disney motion pictures in a spectacular pageant.

Music from all the themed lands in the Magic Kingdom are featured in the daily 3:00 p.m. 25th Birthday Parade, which will run all year each day the Park is open.

All in all, summer in the Park means a medley of magical musical offerings designed to make Disneyland guests forget the outside world — just as they have since the Park's opening in 1955. 🎵

SHOPPING DELIGHTS

Welcome to Tahitian Terrace from Kikkoman

From the moment you first cut into a juicy N.Y. steak or tender teriyaki chicken as served in the island atmosphere of the Tahitian Terrace in Adventureland, you'll know you're in for a magical dining experience. The service, food and Polynesian entertainment are really something to write home about.

Beginning June 14, when the Disneyland Park begins its summer schedule, the Tahitian Terrace will begin serving both lunches and dinners on a regular basis. During the evenings, diners enjoy the Polynesian Revue... a colorful show complete with native dancers and drums, and flaming swords!

Tahitian Terrace is sponsored by Kikkoman — the company that makes the "vintage flavor" soy sauce noted for bringing out the natural goodness in foods. Kikkoman soy sauce is served at every table and used in most of the dishes for which the Terrace is known... pork ribs, mahi-mahi, Polynesian vegetables, Cantonese rice, in addition to the steaks and chicken. The Terrace also serves egg roll, deep fried shrimp and chicken or fruit salads. Children's portions are available.

At the Walt Disney World Vacation Kingdom, Kikkoman sponsors Adventureland Veranda.

Few people realize that shoyu (soy sauce) is undoubtedly man's oldest prepared condiment. An early ancestor of shoyu was a salty paste of fermented grains, which was introduced along with the meatless diet of Buddhism in the sixth century. The

Chicken Teriyaki

- 1 medium-sized fryer, cut into serving sized pieces
- 2/3 cup Kikkoman soy sauce
- 1/4 cup white wine
- 1 clove chopped or minced garlic
- 2 tablespoons brown sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon powdered ginger

Marinate for 1 hour. Remove from sauce and bake at 325° for 1 hour. Baste with marinade 2 or 3 times while cooking.

14th century saw Japan breaking away from China's influence and adhering strictly to the vegetarian diet, all the while improving the technique of the shoyu production. What emerged was a finely balanced seasoning used for a great variety of foods.

Kikkoman Soy Sauce is a naturally fermented blend of soybeans, wheat, water and salt using traditional brewing methods perfected centuries ago. Like fine wine, the true soy sauce must be age-mellowed. During this unhurried fermentation period, many flavors and subtle aromas develop which serve to heighten the important appetite-increasing effect of the sauce.

Kikkoman had its roots in the city of Noda, Japan in the 17th century and was incorporated in 1917. Now Kikkoman Shoyu Co., Ltd. has increased its product line to include other sauces, soup bases and alcoholic beverages.

Discriminating chefs who appreciate the experience and tradition that went into the making of Kikkoman soy sauce don't restrict its use to just meats and gravies. They find that it adds a zestful zip to salad dressings, soups, dips and vegetable toppings. Try it mixed with melted butter and brown sugar, brushed on grapefruit halves and broiled until glazed. A happy note for weight-watchers: soy sauce has only 12 calories per tablespoon compared to 100 or more in a tablespoon of oil or butter. 🍷

Don't Let This Parade Pass You By

One of the many highlights of the 25th Birthday Parade at the Disneyland Theme Park is Cinderella riding in a magnificent crystal coach pulled by six toylike Shetland ponies. The daily parade is just part of the year-long celebration at the Park, which is observing its silver anniversary all year long with a calendar full of special events.

Each colorful unit of the parade typifies a part of the themed land it represents. Mickey Mouse and his best buddies, Donald, Pluto and Goofy, wave to the crowd from the lead unit. From New Orleans Square come dancers and Dixieland music. From the Old West atmosphere of Frontierland, comes an authentic stagecoach pulled by prancing horses. The upbeat sounds of space-age music are featured by a musical group from Tomorrowland. Other popular groups from the Park—the Dapper Dans, Royal Street Bachelors and the Disneyland Park Band will provide live music in the parade.

The most memorable unit of all is the appearance of a six-horse team of prize black Percherons pulling the shining 1907 steam calliope that was first seen in the 1955 opening of the Park. It's the silver and blue icing on the cake of an impressive salute to the first quarter-century of the Magic Kingdom. 🐾

Herbie Goes Bananas

That incomparable Love Bug, "Herbie," certainly gets around. His fourth film, "Herbie Goes Bananas," is scheduled for release in July, and this one will positively establish the free-wheeling Volkswagen as an international celebrity.

"Bananas" was filmed in the Mexican resort cities of Puerto Vallarta and Guadalajara with much of the complex stunt production being recorded in Tijuana and the Panama Canal Zone. Joining Herbie in this new comedy are Cloris Leachman, Harvey Korman, Charles Martin Smith, John Vernon, Elyssa Davalos, Stephan Burns and Joaquin Garay. Television comedienne and dramatic actress Cloris Leachman plays a romance-minded divorcee trying in vain to capture the heart of a dapper cruise ship captain played by Harvey Korman. Stephan Burns and Elyssa Davalos provide the main love interest, having been brought together by the Cupid shenanigans of Herbie the Love Bug. Teaming up with Herbie to thwart the efforts of smugglers in South America is 12-year-old Joaquin Garay III—a regular in tv's "Cliffwood Avenue Gang."

Herbie's latest adventure takes him through the locks of the Panama Canal; into a bullring complete with a raging bull; into the steaming jungle; and finally to a downright dogfight on an airplane runway!

But Herbie is used to dangerous stunts and action-packed productions. His previous comedies—"The Love Bug" (1969), "Herbie Rides Again" (1974) and "Herbie Goes to Monte Carlo" (1977), have proved to be one of the most successful boxoffice series in the history of motion pictures.

From the very beginning, Herbie was no ordinary car. Aside from a physical resemblance to his assembly line counterparts, this 1963 sunroof model Volkswagen bug with the red, white and blue racing stripes, sporting the number "53" on his side, was clearly one in a million. In 1977, Herbie became the first automobile to imprint his tracks for posterity in the cement forecourt of the famed Grauman's Chinese Theatre.

"Herbie Goes Bananas" was written by versatile Disney screenwriter Don Tait who also acted as associate producer. A former child-star, Kevin Corcoran, acts as the second associate producer. Oscar-winner Danny Lee provided the outstanding special effects for the film. Vincent McEveety directed.

The Last Flight of Noah's Ark

RPart of the movie fare offered by Walt Disney Productions this summer will be "The Last Flight of Noah's Ark," a loaded-with-action adventure starring Elliott Gould and Genevieve Bujold. The story's flight follows a turbulent journey of survival for four people in a decrepit World War II B-29 bomber loaded with farm animals.

Genevieve Bujold, winner of several international "Best Actress" awards, plays a prim evangelist who hires Elliott Gould, a pilot who prefers living in the fast lane, to fly the vintage B-29 filled with livestock to a South Pacific mission. Unknown to them, there are two stowaways aboard also—played by popular child movie star Ricky Schroder and by Tammy Lauren of the "Angie" tv series. A compass malfunction forces the plane from its course, and they are forced to beach it on an uncharted tropical island. Unexpected allies come to their rescue and they are able to convert the huge bomber to a makeshift sailboat so that they can sail on to civilization. But this is not before friendships develop between the children and a dolphin called Dodger, and between Gould and Bujold, whose early cold relationship soon melts into romance.

Unexpected help in the form of two Japanese soldiers come to the planewrecked party. The two men, played by Yuki Shimoda and John Fujioka, have been stranded on the island for 35 years, still unaware that World War II has ended. After they've been briefed on past history, the pair prove to be skillful engineers who devise a design which converts the B-29 to a somewhat seaworthy craft. A patchwork sail is rigged which had its origin as a Japanese flag and old parachute. The plexiglass nose section of the plane provides a fascinating underwater panorama of the sea beneath them.

A secluded stretch of beach on the island of Kauai in Hawaii was utilized as the filming site for much of "Noah's Ark" story. At the Disney studio, a special effects team reconstructed the crash of the B-29 in miniature. Many of the underwater scenes were completed far from the open sea in the friendly confines of the sound stage tank where "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" was filmed.

Procuring the five B-29s needed to complete "Noah's Ark" was a challenge to the production personnel. Four scrapped models were located at the Navy China Lake Facilities in the Mojave Desert. Two were shipped to the studio in Burbank dismantled and two to Hawaii where they had to be reassembled for various interior sets. The fifth plane, which had to fly and is one of only two existing models left in the world that is airworthy, was rented from Ralph Johnston of Oakland. (The other is owned by a group calling itself the Confederate Air Force... an organization interested in the preservation of vintage planes.)

With its noted stars and exciting screenplay written by Steven W. Carabatsos, Sandy Glass and George Arthur Bloom based on a story by Ernest K. Gann, "The Last Flight of Noah's Ark" promises to be a favorite of those searching for a summertime film adventure, both colorful and unique. The production was directed by Charles Jarrott and produced by Ron Miller and Jan Williams. 🐻

Gem of the Ocean

"Like a true ship, committed to her element once for all at her Launching, she perished at sea."

Richard Henry Dana

On September 30, 1787 an armed merchant vessel commissioned Columbia sailed from Boston Harbor to become the first ship to carry the American flag in oceans around the world. According to her log, she sailed to the Pacific Northwest and on to the Orient where she traded furs for chinaware, tea, spices and silks.

When she returned to her home port in August of 1790, she had been at sea for 34 months and had logged a distance of 41,899 miles.

During the last months of 1790, the Columbia began her second expedition, again under the command of Captain Robert Gray. During this voyage, Gray discovered the river which today bears the name of the historical vessel. Several more expeditions were made by the Columbia during her proud lifetime. It is believed she finally disappeared without a trace somewhere in the Orient; although one legend has it that she was taken by a crew member and used as a privateer, while still another claims she was wrecked off the rocky shores of Nantucket.

The historical significance of the original Columbia was in its establishment of international trade routes and good relations with the West Coast Indian tribes. Its magnificent counterpart, located in the Disneyland Magic Kingdom, establishes a living history of the ship that helped create a Pacific Coast empire for the United States.

The fully-rigged, three-masted replica is berthed at Fowler's Harbor across from Tom Sawyer's Island in the Theme Park during the winter season. She was dedicated there on June 14, 1958. Research in the Library of Congress and a single steel engraving from the book, "Voyages of the Columbia," provided the background for the design of the vessel. Her hull was constructed at Todd Shipyards and then completed at the Park by workmen using similar tools to those used on the original ship.

"Below Decks" on the Columbia was opened February 22, 1964. It is an authentic replica of living conditions on the Berth Deck of the original ship... a veritable maritime museum. Visitors see the mess table

See the great stars close up!

200 incredibly lifelike movie and TV stars in 100 realistic settings.

The whole family will love this one-of-a-kind experience, seeing the realistic figures of so many great comedians, Western heroes, musical stars, children's favorites, great leading men and women, and much more.

It's a Hall of Fame of great stars, past and present, in their most famous scenes, in many cases in the original wardrobes worn by the stars themselves.

And the likenesses are uncanny.

Spend an amazing two or three hours seeing the greats like John Wayne, Barbra Streisand, Paul Newman and Robert Redford, Laurel and Hardy, Redd Foxx, Elizabeth Taylor, and astounding settings from the most memorable movies and TV shows! There's nothing else like it in the world!

surrounded by officers' cabins. The Captain's Great Cabin astern is furnished with a dining table, two bunks, chart table, and navigational equipment. Along the port side is an exhibit of tackle, blocks, sail and rope-making gear. There is a forge for tool making and an open-hearth galley on the opposite side for the cook. In the fore'sle are eight (not too roomy) bunks which were for the able and sometimes not too able seamen.

Topside, the sturdy Douglas fir planking of the Columbia stretches for an overall deck length of over 83 feet. Her mainmast reaches 84 feet above the weather deck.

Carrying passengers along the Rivers of America during the summer, the gallant Columbia joins a Disneyland fleet that includes the sternwheeler Mark Twain, keelboats, Tom Sawyer Island rafts and Indian war canoes. But although she is confined to the waters of a river, the Columbia has the proud bearing of her counterpart that once knew the freedom of much vaster expanses... when she was truly an original "gem" of the ocean. 🐻
